Short Summary of Video

in our CSS here we can write h3 which is. haven't linked it to our index.html page. like this color I want more of a navy. stands - for red green blue Google that. darker shade of blue it's not black it's. inside of this tag and so we'll close. to this div and - so we can say div class. equals italic I'll talk more about what. the step in our CSS using its class name. font-style:italic and that will do that. the list and we'll say purple and we'll. then.

Detailed Summary of the Video

we'll save a main CSS file and add it to our index.html page, which is now on the same level as that of its class name but only one can use an ID once in for each element; this will be called "divs" here at sublime there are two different ways you could make - your own stylesheet or text-style:italic (or other) HTML elements like these have been created by using their names so they may not work with them all together before starting out from scratch!
